THE VALUE OF PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE

Personal knowledge is the winning factor in the culminating contests of this competitive age and when of ample character it places its fortunate possessor in the front ranks of

The Well Informed of the World.

A vast fund of personal knowledge is really essential to the achievement of the highest excellence in any field of human effort.

A Knowledge of Forms, Knowledge of Functions and Knowledge of Products are all of the utmost value in questions of life and health when a true and wholesome remedy is desired it should be remembered that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., is an ethical product which has met with the approval of the most eminent physicians and gives universal satisfaction, because it is a remedy of Known Quality, Known Efficacy and Known Component Parts and has won the valuable patronage of millions of the Well Informed of the world, who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual use that it is the first and best of family laxatives, for which no extravagant or unreasonable claims are made.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to worldwide acceptance as the most excellent family laxative. As its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well Informed of the world to be the best we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of—Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects, always note, when purchasing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup

Co.—printed on the front of every package, whether you call for—Syrup of Figs

—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

DENY DEAL FOR CROPS.

Manager for Company Says No Sale Has Been Made.

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 7.—The truth of the report published in the Louisville papers this afternoon to the effect that the 1905 and 1906 crops of pooled tobacco and the 1907 crop yet in the field belonging to the members of the Green River District Tobacco Growers' Association had been sold to the American Tobacco Company in Owensboro. "If any deal of this nature had been made I would know about it," said Mr. Englehard. "I would be the one to buy the tobacco. No deal has been made."

FIXING OF THE COST

THE FACTORS IN PRICES OF COMMODITIES.

PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION

Equity in Division of Profits to All Engaged in Producing, Manufacturing and Selling.

Where the masses of people better informed as to principles underlying business transactions and commerce in general there would be less cause for complaint as to matters pertaining to buying and selling of commodities.

One of the faults, if it may be so termed, is the inclination of the people to complain about prices they must pay for goods required for domestic and other uses. There can be no doubt but that in many districts retail merchants exact exorbitant prices, this to an extent is the fault of the people who are little acquainted with real values. There are three important things to be considered in the fixing of the selling price of all commodities. These factors are the cost of the raw materials, the expense of manufacturing and the expense of distribution. From commercial transactions neither of these basic elements can be eliminated.

The farmer who is the grower of corn, wheat and other cereals that comprises food stuffs, receives compensation for his product in accordance with the laws of supply and demand, and the values that regulate the monetary markets of the world. The producer of cotton in the southern states, must receive for his product compensation that is based upon the cost of labor, manufacture and what finished articles in the cotton line may bring in the markets of the world. The producer of the raw materials must pay for his labor, and for his investment in farm lands and farm equipment. The manufacturer who buys the raw products must take into consideration the expense of labor, the maintenance of his manufacturing plant, the interest upon the amount invested, and also various other items, and the sum of these with what he can secure for his finished product, regulates the price that he pays for the raw material.

In the distribution of goods the middle man plays an important part. He is the go-between the producer of the raw material the manufacturer, and the manufacturer and the consumer. He cannot well be eliminated from commercial transactions. He performs a service that neither the producer of the raw material or the manufacturer can more economically perform. The middle man is the jobber, the commission agent and the retailer; each performing his special service in the matter of distribution. The consumer is the one who is the final buyer of commodities who utilizes them for his own use and the uses of his family. There should be a real value and this value is determined solely by the elements referred to herein. The consumer must expect to contribute his little towards the maintenance of the cost of the commodity. He is the beginning link, as well as the ending link of every transaction. The farmer who grows wheat, when he forces the grocer when he buys his flour to sell the flour at a low rate, indirectly has an influence in lowering the market for the wheat that he produces. When the consumer demands that goods be sold at a price below the cost of production, he invites substitution of inferior goods, adulteration of the articles and encourages a system that is unwholesome.

The people should understand that they never receive anything for nothing, or receive anything of value for less than its value unless under some abnormal circumstance. Of late years there has been a system grown up of offering great bargains in various kinds of goods by catalogue, sent through the mails, and presenting attractive and illusive advertising that goods are being sold at less than cost. The intelligent man or woman will carefully consider all the circumstances relative to such offers, and will be guided accordingly. It is evident that when special bargains are made there are conditions that justify such bargains; that goods are not of standard grade, are stale, or deteriorated in some manner. Also there has been a system of goods being grown up that is unwholesome, and to an extent an imposition upon the people as the system compels them to pay for articles that are not essential for them to have. The man who buys sugar does not care to be forced under the guise of paying for sugar to pay for a paper of pins or a package of needles, every time they buy a "free premium." It is well to bear these points in mind, and a little study into business economics and principles will be highly advantageous to the one who desires to know about the proper value of goods he must buy.

Cure of Shade Trees.

While shade trees are very desirable along sidewalks and roads, unless they are kept well trimmed they become much of a nuisance, preventing exposure of rain and helping make muddy streets. It is well for citizens of every town to look after the trimming of shade trees, and the planting of shade trees where they are needed.

An eminent professor of the United States Agricultural Department has been studying the hen. Think of writing books on hens. Listen to this! The American hen produces more in dollars and cents than all the gold and silver mines in the country combined; and if the value of the hens be added, the aggregate is twice the annual yield of all the gold and silver mines and six times the value of the wool crop.

The most independent man on earth is the farmer, for he makes the earth yield almost everything needed for life. He knows that as he sows so will he reap. He usually keeps strong and healthy with constant strife with nature—in sunshine and in pure air. At sundown, when work is done, he finds most refreshing sleep in bed, such as only a tired man knows. In the same way that the earth yields food for man, so does it provide remedies for human ills. Thousands of households throughout the farming districts of the United States know the value of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is nature's most valuable and health-giving agent—made without the use of alcohol. It contains roots, herbs and barks, and is the concentration of nature's vitality as found in the fields and woods. This remedy has a history which speaks well for it because it was given to the public by Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Rest and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., nearly forty years ago, and has since been used by druggists in ever increasing quantities. Some use one enjoys a large sale for a few years, then disappears from the public attention, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved such a reliable blood remedy and tonic that it often enjoys the confidence of several generations in a family, and its increased sale year by year coming from the recommendations of those who have tried it, and prove its lasting merit so that every bottle bears the stamp of public approval. Moreover, Dr. Pierce guarantees that it contains no alcohol or narcotic.

Hon. John E. Sull, Registrar of Deeds, Court House, Durham, N. C., writes: "We have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in our family, and have known of some of our neighbors using it. We have always found it to do all that is claimed for it, and feel confident that it is a splendid remedy." Mrs. Bettie Mill, of Cotton, N. C., writes: "I procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and took it for my cough. The medicine acted like a charm; cured my cough all O. K. I feel very grateful to you for your kindness. Use my name if you choose." Do you know your own system? A complete medical book and physiology of the body, is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which can be had for the price of postage. Send Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10-cent stamps for the cloth-bound book, or 21 stamps for the paper-bound volume of 166 pages.

A Favorite Resort.

Marion, whither Edward goes for his annual "cure" was almost unknown a century ago. It was virtually discovered by Dr. Nehr, who published a booklet in 1813 describing the marvelous results upon patients of his who had been drinking the waters. But Dr. Nehr recommended that all invalids repairing to Marion should take the waters, because no accommodation whatever was then provided in such a sequestered spot. Matters had not much improved in 1840, when Dr. Nehr visited Marion and drank the waters, for he wrote to a friend: "I feel as if I were in the American solitudes, where the forests are cut down to build up a city within three years." Nearly 50,000 pilgrims now annually make pilgrimage to Marion.—Dundee Advertiser.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Cure May Be Had.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney disease, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Leslie K. Hickman, living on Arch street, Madisonville, Ky., says: "I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I tasted their merits about three months ago and the results could not have been more satisfactory. I had pain through the inferior of my back directly over the kidneys which caused me considerable annoyance. Stopping or straightening caused sharp twinges to catch me in the kidneys. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box. I noticed a decided improvement from the use of this box, and continued taking them, using a second box, which completely cured me. I have every confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills and cheerfully give them my recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Plan Excavations at Memphis.

An appeal is being made in England for funds to undertake the great task of excavating the ruins of Memphis. It is expected that England will now do for Memphis what the French government has done for Delphi and the Germans for Olympia. The sites of the four great temples are plainly marked, so that exploration can begin at once. This mass of ruins covers 100 acres, as much as the whole of the site at Karnak, and it is estimated that $15,000 will be needed annually for fifteen years to accomplish the work. Important material is believed to lie within a few yards of the surface, so that results should be reached promptly.

Women Who Write at Home.

About one woman in 100 keeps up her music after marriage, although they may have passed years of their own time and spent many dollars belonging to their fathers in study. The number that drops off in art is even greater, but writing has a fascination difficult to resist. A great deal of the writing done by women comes from homes, more or less comfortable and happy. Much of it is the kind not easily duplicated and it would be nonsense to compel such women to forget their talents. Many a son has been fitted for his life work by the ability of his mother to earn money at a steady rate.

Easily Explained.

The city boarder was angry all over.

"Look here!" he blurted. "You told me that you didn't put water in your milk. I found live evidence in the last pail."

"Live evidence," drawled the old farmer, blandly. "What was it, neighbor?"

"Why, I found a frog."

The old farmer laughed and stroked his long yellow whiskers.

"Ha, ha! Don't let that worry you," he answered. "That frog came from the food of the old brandle cow."

"And what has she been eating?"

"Hope!"

His Future Assured.

William Vogt, the criminal hero of the famous Kopenick adventure, has a pleasant future before him when he is released from prison in 1919. The committee which was formed last winter to promote his welfare announces that sufficient subscriptions have been received to give him a freehold residence, a workshop for his cobbling and a pension. Moreover, no fewer than 138 women have written offering to marry him. The majority of the ladies are German, but two American girls and one English widow are among the number.

Pressed Meat.

Cold boiled beef chopped; cold boiled eggs sliced; molten beef with stock in which it was cooked; season with salt and pepper. Put layer of beef in jar, then eggs, alternately, until all is used. Press.

A Narrow Escape.

G. W. Cloyd, a merchant of Plunk, Mo., had a narrow escape four years ago, when he ran a jimson bur into his thumb. He says: "The doctor wanted to amputate it but I would not consent. I bought a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and that cured the dangerous wound." 25c at R. C. Hardwick's, druggist.

Uncomplimentary Criticism.

At a recent sale of books and curios the auctioneer said: "This book, gentlemen, is especially valuable, as it contains a marginal note in the handwriting of John Dryden. Five pounds offered. Going—going—gone. It is yours, dear." The auctioneer marginal note by the renowned scholar was as follows: "This book is not worth the paper it is printed on."

to be divorced from your appendix. There will be no occasion for it if you keep your bowels regular with Dr. King's New Life Pills. Their action is so gentle that the appendix never has cause to make the least complaint. Guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist, 25c. Try them.

Famous Old Chapultepec.

The castle of Chapultepec is the most noted and historic edifice in Mexico. It has a history dating far into the days when Mexico was ruled by Spanish viceroys, and following that it served in the same capacity during the days that Mexico was an empire, republic, empire and republic again.

Bilious? Feel heavy after dinner? Tongue coated? Bitter taste? Complexion sallow? Liver needs waking up. Doan's Regulax cures bilious attacks. 25 cents at any drug store.

William E. Curtis, writing from San Francisco, says the natural resources of California would provide amply for a population of 50,000,000.

The Bride.

She is witty, she is pretty,
She's a linguist, too, they say,
She's as jolly, merry,
Simply does not come her way.

She is simply grace itself,
But she never loses "The money!"
When it comes to bonds and pelf.

Slips a player and a stayer

It Stands Alone as the one medicine for women, the makers of which took their patients fully into their confidence and the weaknesses of which are printed on the wrapper of every bottle having the great Laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Pellets.

It is not possible for not probable that elements necessary for the body-health are contained in the native medicinal roots found in the earth, digested in the plant laboratory of nature and made ready for use or animal?

The medicinal virtues of many American plants and roots were known to the three Cohobas, the great medicine men of early Indians. This a root known to modern physicians as Calophyllum or Blue Cohob was known to the three Cohobas as "Squaw root." Another, known to the Indians as "Rattlesnake root," is used in modern medicine as "Cimicifuga."

Prof. King's American Dispensary, an authority in these matters, writes: "The Indians set a high value on Rattlesnake root (Black Cohob) in diseases of women. It is surpassed by no other drug in congestive conditions of the parts where there are dragging pains and tenderness. After many years of study and experiment, Dr. Pierce, the medical director of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., put up a prescription of his own, containing the root, alcoholic, glyceric extracts of the two above mentioned ingredients, together with Golden Seal root, Lady's Slipper root and Ulferson root. Thus, there is no mystery in the make-up of this famous 'Prescription.' The use of alcohol is entirely avoided in its manufacture, and the use of any of the ingredients is not of any value in the wrapper of every bottle having the great Laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Pellets.

Fair Monday and Tuesday

The fourth trial of Caleb Powers was called at Georgetown yesterday.

The Pythian Home near Lexington will be formally opened on Thanksgiving day.

Tinsley's majority over Brasher in Hopkins county was 214. Willson carried the county by 11, Cox by 19. Breathitt by 7, while Laffoon, Democrat, had 36 majority.

It is believed that the word has gone forth that there are to be no Republican "ratification meetings" held in Kentucky. No offense is to be given to Democrats who helped do it.

Representative W. J. Gooch, of Simpson, is a candidate for speaker of the House, but the fact that he is understood to be Gov. Beckham's choice for the place may or may not be a source of strength for him.

W. S. Taylor has written from Indianapolis to a friend in Paducah that he will soon return to Kentucky. Watch him, night riders, he may be headed towards the Black Patch to buy tobacco for the trust.

Stuyvesant Fish, former president of the Illinois Central railroad, said that he would send out a new request for proxies for the annual meeting of the Illinois Central stockholders, to be held in Chicago December 18.

The Fairview Magisterial district of Todd county has ad opted a stock law by a large majority. The time is coming when this kind of a law should be adopted by the whole state. It is cheaper to confine live stock than to fence farms.

The editor of the Kentuckian doesn't like much to live under Republican rule, but we will have to try to worry along somehow. There are no Democratic places to move to except Oklahoma and Trig county. Oklahoma is too far off, and our night riding neighbors have advised us to stay out of Trig county. So what can't be cured must be endured.

The greatest need of the Democratic party in the late convention was a platform dealing with live issues. As it was, every candidate made his own platform and no two of them were alike. A profanation of the Christian Sabbath in Louisville was Tyler's platform, while a declaration in favor of prohibition by Beckham and Hager drove the whiskey vote en masse into the Republican camp. In several counties open advocates of night riding ran on their own platforms, while a hundred speakers were turned loose unbridled to advocate everything from prohibition to barn-burning, with no platform of principles to save the party from its own friends. Next time let us go back to the old fashioned convention. May we never have another rich man's primary in Kentucky.

When Gov.-elect Willson is inaugurated on December 2 he will have numerous offices to fill at once. Among them are an adjutant general, at a salary of $2,000 a year; an assistant adjutant general at $1,200 a year; a state inspector and examiner at a salary of $3,000 a year; it being necessary for the latter appointment, however, to be confirmed by the senate. He will also have the appointment of a private secretary at a salary of $2,000 a year, and members of the state board of control.

Robt. J. Phillips' term is out Jan. 1, but Dr. Milton Board and Percy Haly can hold on until after the senate adjourns. The governor can remove for cause, subject to an appeal to the senate. The anti-Beckham men in the senate may back up the new governor, especially if he should carry out the pledge made in his speech to appoint a non-partisan board.

Mr. Watterson has been on the war path since the election and gives these reasons for the Democratic defeat:

"The queer proceeding with respect to the mountain feudists, the immunity enjoyed by the outlaws of the tobacco belt, the snap-primary with its stuffed returns, the shameless use of the public patronage in dovetailing the machine, were enough to arouse the distrust of fair-minded men. * * * Finally, as the crowning mistake of Stolidity masquerading as a statesman, these blind leaders of the blind, wholly unconceiving the force of a hysterical wave of prohibition, sought to mount this and ride it, cutting loose not only from Democratic tradition, but from the facts of the situation and the logic of argument. * * * Fancy a Democratic ticket preaching unimpaired laws in the state, and a Democratic ticket preaching no law at all in the city."

NOT HYDROPHOBIA.

Mr. Keith's Dog Was Suffering From "Black Tongue."

The bird dog which bit Mrs. John Mitchell and J. W. Allen on November 3 was kept confined by Mr. David Keith, its owner, until last Tuesday, when the animal died. It had no symptoms of hydrophobia, but was evidently suffering from a disease that dog fanciers call "black tongue." It always proves fatal but causes no injury to persons bitten. It makes the dog cross from its sufferings, its mouth is kept half open and saliva escapes; the dog cannot eat but drinks a great deal of water. At times it gets quiet and then is attacked with renewed spells. Some of the symptoms are suggestive of hydrophobia, but the disease is entirely different and breeders of dogs who are familiar with it say that it need not be feared.

Both Mr. Allen and Mrs. Mitchell went to Chicago for treatment, as they were very much frightened.

AUGUSTUS E. WILLSON

A Few Facts About Kentucky's Governor Elect.

Augustus E. Willson, Kentucky's Republican Governor-elect, was born in Mayville, October 13, 1846. He is a son of the late Hiram Willson and Ann Colvin Ennis. Both parents were of New England origin, the father having been born in Windsor, Vt., and the mother in Westerly, R. I. They settled in Mayville in the "30s." Mr. Willson received his early education at the Alfred Academy, in Western New York, and after a preparatory course entered Harvard University. He is a graduate of the Harvard Law School class of '69. Immediately after leaving college he came to Louisville, and entered the law office of Judge John M. Harlan, now Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. For many years he was Justice Harlan's law partner, and was associated with him in many prominent legal cases. Since Justice Harlan has been in Washington, Mr. Willson has practiced almost exclusively in the United States Court. Recently he formed a law partnership with Judge William G. Dearing and Arthur E. Hopkins. The firm occupies a suite of handsome offices on the seventh floor of the new Paul Jones building.

Mr. Willson has always been an earnest Republican, as he said in his campaign speeches, "I hollered for Fremont in '66." In many Kentucky and national political campaigns he has been prominent. He took the stump for Judge Harlan in the latter's race for Governorship, and years later in the Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt political campaign. He was nominated and defeated three times for Congress in the Louisville district in the years 1884, 1888 and 1892, then hopelessly Democratic, and succeeded in cutting down the Democratic majority each time. In 1886 he was nominated for Congress and was elected by a majority of 67 votes, but was counted out by a change of ballots in one precinct in the tenth ward and at Fisherville, which gave his opponent a majority of 142.

In 1887 Mr. Willson married Miss Mary Ekin, daughter of Gen. James A. Ekin, of Louisville. Mr. and Mrs. Willson have no children, one, a boy, having died in his infancy.

Mr. Willson was a delegate to the National Convention of 1884, 1888, 1892 and 1904. He is the first Harvard Governor of Kentucky.—Louisville Herald.

ROCKBRIDGE STEMERY

Big Factory On North Main
Used By Association
Prizing Firm.

A representative of the Kentuckian visited the Rockbridge Stemery yesterday and the popular prizing house is already getting busy with the association tobacco. Last year it was operated independently, but this year Messrs. Dorris & Fairleigh have a contract with the Planters association and are ready for the rush. They have perhaps the most commodious factory in the city. The basement is used for threshing rooms. The prizing room is on the main floor and is equipped with ten screws and operated with steam. Also on this floor are the classing rooms and numerous rooms for bulking and storage. The drying rooms are in the third story. The factory has 25,000 feet of floor space for bulking and crops can be kept separate, no matter how many are sent in.

Messrs. Dorris & Fairleigh are experienced tobacco men and give their personal attention to the business. W. R. Dorris has charge of the factory, while R. M. Fairleigh is to be found in the office. They usually work from 50 to 75 hands and their workmen are first class men in their several departments who have been with them heretofore. Those who send tobacco to them may feel assured that their interests will be properly looked after.

NEGRO SHOT

Through Left Arm Saturday Night.

Eugene Littlepage and Charlie Garrett, both colored, got into a difficulty Saturday night. It is alleged that the trouble was brought about by Littlepage's attention to Garrett's wife. Garrett took a shot at Littlepage, the shot taking effect in the left arm. The police were notified and went out to Cleveland Avenue, where they found Littlepage leaning up against a fence scared half to death. He had made up his mind that he was bound to die, but when the police assured him that the wound was very slight he was soon himself again. Garrett was arrested, but was released on bond.

Often The Kidneys Are

Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all the best druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Piquette, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Piquette, N. Y., on every bottle.

HEROIC ACT

Engineer Blown to Atoms in Saving a Town.

Douglas, Ariz., Nov. 11.—The death list as a result of the Nacazri explosion yesterday is now placed at fifteen Mexicans and John Chisholm, aged 13, who was riding on the train when the explosion occurred. A train on the narrow gauge railroad to the Pilares mines in some way caught fire. On the train were two open cars heavily loaded with explosives, and the fact that the concentrator and a good part of the town of Nacazri were saved from ruin was due to the bravery of the Mexican engineer, Jesus Garcia. Realizing that to cut out the burning cars and escape on the engine would expose the town to probable destruction, he called to the rest to jump and started to run the train away from the town. He had taken about half a mile when the explosion occurred and he was blown to atoms.

Lost His 'Possums.

Jesus Burrus not long ago went 'possum hunting and succeeded in catching two fine opossums. They were kept under a fattening process for several days and he had them nicely dressed and told the cook to hang them out to keep them nice and cool. They were hung out on the back porch, but when Mr. Burrus went out to look after them two hours later, no 'possums were in sight. Up to a late hour last night they had not been returned.

Who Will be Judge?

Many guesses have been made as to who will step into County Judge James Breathitt's shoes when he assumes the duties of attorney general. Governor-elect Willson will have to name a man for the place as the national election will be held next year and Judge Breathitt's successor cannot be selected by the people.

The following gentlemen have been mentioned by their friends as probabilities: Chas. O. Prowse, attorney; J. Mat Starling, former circuit clerk; ex-Judge A. H. Anderson and Stanley Long, assistant revenue collector and attorney.

Of course "there are others," who at the proper time will be heard from. There is plenty of good timber in the Republican party, but it is a little early to begin guessing as to how the pie will be served. Already Mr. Willson is being besieged by office-seekers and why shouldn't members of the party here begin making a move in that direction?

CANNOT RECOMMEND CUTICURA TOO HIGHLY

"I take great pleasure in informing you that I was a sufferer of eczema in my very bad form for the past three years. I consulted and treated with a number of physicians in Chicago, but to no avail. I commenced using the Cuticura Remedy, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, three months ago, and today I am perfectly well, the disease having left me entirely. I cannot recommend the Cuticura Remedy highly to any one suffering with the disease that I have had. Mrs. Florence E. Atwood, 18 Crilly Place, Chicago, Ill., October 2, 1905. Wm. L. & J. B. THE FOLDED

BY EADLE ASHLEY WALCOTT

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Giles Dudley arrives in San Francisco to join his friend and distant relative Henry Wilton, whom he was to assist in an important and mysterious task, and who accompanied Dudley on the ferry boat trip into the city. The remarkable resemblance of the two men is noted and commented on by passengers on the ferry. They are a man with snake eyes, which sends a thrill through Dudley. Wilton possesses an explanation of the strange brand Dudley is to perform, but occurrences cause him to know it is one of no ordinary meaning. Wilton leaves Giles in their room with instruction to wait his return and shoot any one who tries to enter.

CHAPTER II.—Dudley hears a head shouts and curses and the noise of a quarrel. Henry rather in and at his request the roommates quickly exchange clothes, and he hurries out again. Henry has in possession of a half dozen men. He summons a policeman but they are unable to find any trace of a criminal.

CHAPTER III.—Giles returns to his room and hunts for some evidence that might explain his strange mission. He might explain his strange mission. He might explain his strange mission. He might explain his strange mission.

CHAPTER IV.—Dudley is summoned to the morgue and there finds the dead body of the friend. He gives the name of James Dudley to the coroner. He is puzzled over the note he had received asking him to call at the bank for money. He is called before the coroner and is asked to perform in the street. He is called before the coroner and is asked to perform in the street.

CHAPTER V.—In order to discover the secret mission his friend had entrusted to him, Dudley continues his disguise and permits himself to be known as Henry Wilton. He is puzzled over the note he had received asking him to call at the bank for money. He is called before the coroner and is asked to perform in the street.

As I reflected thus, I came upon a crowd massed about the steps of a great granite building in Pine Street; a whirlpool of men, it seemed, with cross-currents and eddies, and from the whole rose the murmur of excited voices.

It was the Stock Exchange, the ramblers' paradise, in which millions were staked, won and lost, and ruin and affluence walked side by side.

As I watched the swaying, shouting mass with wonder and amusement, a thrill shot through me. Upon the steps of the building, amid the crowd of brokers and speculators, I saw a tall, broad-shouldered man of fifty or fifty-five, his face keen, shrewd and hard-browed. He was dressed in a strong, yellow, yellow-gray mustache and imperial half-hiding and half-revealing the firm lines of the mouth, with the mark of the wolf strong upon the whole. It was a face never to be forgotten as long as I should hold memory at all. It was the face I had seen twelve hours before in the lantern flash in the dreadful alley, with the cry of murder ringing in my ears. Then it was lighted by the fierce fires of rage and hatred, and marked with the chagrin of baffled plans. Now it was cool, good-humored, alert for the battle of the Exchange that had already begun. But I knew it for the same, and was near crying aloud that here was a murderer.

I clutched my nearest neighbor by the arm, and demanded to know who he was. "Doddridge Knapp," replied the man civilly. "He's running the Cholera deal now, and it's only guess which side he's on. I'd make a fortune in the next few days. He's the King of Pine Street."

While I was looking at the King of the Street and listening to my neighbor's tales of his operations, Doddridge Knapp's eyes met mine. To my amazement there was a look of recognition in them. Yet he made no sign, and in a moment was gone.

This, then, was the enemy I was to meet! This was the explanation of Detective Coogan's hint that I should be safer in jail than free on the streets to face this man's hatred or revenge.

I must have stood in a daze on the busy street, for I was roused by some one shaking my arm with vigor. "Come! are you asleep?" said the man, speaking in my ear. "Can't you hear?"

"Yes, yes," said I, rousing my attention. "The chief wants you." His voice was low, almost a whisper.

"The chief? Who? Where?" I asked. "At the City Hall!" I jumped to the conclusion that it was, of course, the chief of police, on the scent of the murder.

"No. Of course not. In the second office, you know."

This was scarcely enlightening. Doubtless, however, it was a summons from my unknown employer.

"I'll follow you," I said promptly. "I don't think I'd better go," said the messenger dubiously. "He didn't say anything about it, and you know he's rather—"

"Well, I order it," I cut in decisively. "I may need you."

I certainly needed him at that moment if I was to find my way. "Go ahead a few steps," I said. "My tone and manner were such that I saw I was being followed."

word, I sauntered after him with as careless an air as I could assume. My heart was beating fast. I felt that I was close to the mystery and that the next half hour would determine whether I was to take up Henry Wilton's work or to find my way in safety back to my own name and person.

My unconscious guide led the way along Montgomery Street into an office building, up a flight of stairs, and into a back hallway.

"Stay a moment," I said, as he had his hand on the door knob. "On second thoughts you can wait down stairs."

He turned back, and as his footsteps echoed down the stair I opened the door and entered the office.

As I crossed the threshold my heart gave a great bound and I stopped short. Before me was Doddridge Knapp, the King of the Street, the man for whom about all others in the world I felt a loathing and fear.

Doddridge Knapp finished signing his name to a paper on a desk before he looked up.

"Come in and sit down," he said. The voice was alert and business like—the voice of a man accustomed to command. But I could find no trace of feeling in it, nothing that could tell me of the hatred or desperate purpose that would inspire such a tragedy as I had witnessed, or warn me of danger to come.

"But the door and sit—own. Just spring that lock, will you? We might be interrupted."

I was at it at all certain that I should not wish very earnestly that he might be interrupted in what Bret Harte would call the "subsequent proceedings." But I followed his directions.

Doddridge Knapp was not less impressive at close view than at long range. The strong face grew stronger when seen from the near distance.

"My dear Wilton," he said, "I've come to a place where I've not to trust somebody, so I've come back to you." The voice was oily and persuasive, but the keen gray eyes shot out a glance from under the bushy eyebrows that thrilled me as a warning.

"It's very kind of you," I said, swallowing my astonishment with an effort.

"Well," said Knapp, "the way you handled that Ophir matter was perfectly satisfactory. But I'll tell you that it's on Mrs. Knapp's say-so, as much as on your own doing, that I selected you for this job."

"I'm much obliged to Mrs. Knapp," I said politely. "I was in a deep water. It was plainly unsafe to do anything but drift."

"Oh, you can settle that with her at your next call," he said good humoredly.

The faded nerves of surprise refused to respond further. If I had received a telegram informing me that the dispute over the presidency had been settled by shoving both Hayes and Tilden and giving the unanimous vote of the electors to me, I should have accepted it as a matter of course. I took my place unquestioningly as a valued acquaintance of Doddridge Knapp's and a particular friend of Mrs. Knapp's.

Yet it struck me as strange that the keen-eyed King of the Street had failed to discover that he was not talking to Henry Wilton, but to some one whose name he had never heard.

There were enough differences in feature and voice to distinguish us among intimate friends, though there were not enough to be seen by casual acquaintances. I had the key in the next sentence he spoke.

"I have decided that it is better this time to do our business face to face. Don't want to transmit messages on this affair, and even cipher notes are dangerous, confoundedly dangerous."

Then we had not been close acquaintances.

"Oh, by the way, you have that other cipher yet, haven't you?" he asked.

"No, burnt it," I said unblushingly.

"That's right," he said. "It was best not to take risks. Of course you understand that it won't do for us to be seen together."

"Certainly not," I answered.

"I have arranged for another office. Here's the address. Yours is Room 15. I have the key to it, and it is vacant between 11 and 12. Let's sign on it. They open into each other. You understand?"

"Perfectly," I said. "You will be here by nine o'clock for your orders. If you get none by twelve, there will be none for the day."

"I can't be there, I'll let you know." I was off my guard for a moment, thinking of the possible demands of Henry's unknown employer.

"You will do nothing of the kind," said Doddridge Knapp shortly. His voice, so smooth and businesslike a moment before, changed suddenly to a growl. His heavy eyebrows came down, and from under them flashed a dangerous light. "You will be there when I tell you, young man, or you'll have to reckon with another sort of customer than the one you've been dealing with. This matter requires prompt and strict obedience to orders. One slip may ruin the whole plan."

"You can depend on me," I said with assumed confidence. "Am I to have any discretion?"

"None whatever."

I had thus far been able to get no hint of his purpose. If I had not known what I knew, I should have supposed that his mind was concentrated on the apparent object before him—to secure the real and fidelity of an employee in some important business operation.

"And what am I to do?" I asked. "As a capitalist," he said with an ironical smile. "Buy and sell what I tell you to buy and sell. Keep under cover, but not too much under cover. You can pick your own brokers. Better begin with Buckstein and Epner, though. Your checks will be honored at the Nevada Bank. Oh, here's a cipher in case I want to write you. I suppose you'll want some ready money."

Doddridge Knapp was certainly a liberal provider, for he shoved a handful of twenty-dollar gold pieces across the desk in a way that made my eyes open.

"By the way," he continued, "I don't think I have your signature, have I?"

"No, sir," I replied with prompt confidence.

"Well, just write it on this slip then. I'll turn it into the bank for your identification. You can take the checkbook with you."

"Anything more?"

"That's all," he replied with a nod of dismissal. "Maybe it's to-morrow—maybe it's next month."

I walked out into Montgomery Street, bewildered among the conflicting mysteries in which I had been entangled.

CHAPTER VI.
A Night at Barton's.

Room 15 was a plain, comfortable office in a plain, comfortable building on Clay Street, not far from the heart of the business district. It was on the second floor, and its one window opened to the rear, and faced a desolate assortment of back yards, rear walls, and rickety stairways.

The room had a worn carpet, and there was a desk, a few chairs and a shelf of law books. The place looked as though it had belonged to a lawyer in reduced circumstances, and I could not wonder how it had come into the possession of Doddridge Knapp, and what had become of the former occupant.

I tried to thrust aside a spirit of melancholy, and looked narrowly to the opportunities offered by the room for attack and defense. The walls were solidly built. The window-casement showed an unusual depth for a building of that height. The wall had been put in to withstand an earthquake shock. The door opening into the hall, door into Room 16, and the window furnished the three avenues of possible attack or retreat.

The depression of spirits that progressed with my survey of the room deepened into gloom as I flung myself into the arm-chair before the desk, and tried to plan some way out of the tangle in which I was involved. How was I, single-handed, to contend against the power of the richest man in the city, and bring home to him the murder of Henry Wilton?

I could look for no assistance from the police. The words of Detective Coogan were enough to show that only the most convincing proof of guilt, backed by fear of public sentiment, could bring the department to raise a finger against him. And how could I hope to rouse that public sentiment? What would my word count against that of the King of the Street?

Who was the motive for the crime? Until that was made clear I could not hope to piece together the scraps of evidence into a solid structure of proof. And what a prospect!

one Doddridge Knapp who sought the life of Henry Wilton, with the Doddridge Knapp of this morning, who was ready to engage him in his confidential business? And had I the right to accept any part in his business?

Fatigue and loss of sleep deepened the dejection of mind that oppressed me with these instant questions, and as I vainly struggled against it, carried me at last into the oblivion of dreamless slumber.

The next I knew I was awaking to the sound of breaking glass. It was dark but for a feeble light that came from the window. Every bone in my body ached from the cramped position in which I had slept, and it seemed an age before I could rouse myself to act. It was, however, but a second before I was on my feet, revolver in hand, with the desk between me and a possible assailant.

Silence, threatening, oppressive, surrounded me as I stood listening, watching, for the next move.

"I thought the transom was open," said a low voice, which still seemed to be struggling with suppressed laughter.

"I guess it woke him up," said another and harsher voice. "I heard a noise in there."

"You're certain he's there?" asked the first voice with another chuckle. "Sure, Dicky. I saw him go in, and Porter and I have taken turns to watch ever since."

"Well, it's time he came out," said Dicky. "He can't be asleep after that racket. Say!" he called, Harry! What's the matter with you? If you're dead let us know."

"They appeared friendly, but I hesitated in framing an answer."

"We'll have to break down the door, I guess," said Dicky. "Something must have happened." And a resounding kick shook the panel.

"Hold on!" I cried. "What's wanted?"

"Oh," said Dicky sarcastically. "You've come to life again, have you?"

"Well, I'm not dead yet."

"Then strike a light and let us in. And take a look at that reminder you'll find wrapped around the rock I heaved through the transom. I thought it was open." And Dicky went off into another series of chuckles in appreciation of his mistake.

AWAKENING

To The Fact That Warde is Pre-Eminent.

There seems to be every evidence necessary to predict an unusually large attendance at the tabernacle next Friday night to greet Frederick Warde, the greatest living exponent of the great Shakespeare. Mr. Warde left the stage at the height of his fame and gave himself up to the more careful study of the poet, so that on the platform, without playing upon the emotions of his hearers, he could appeal to their intelligence and enable them to see the beauty of Shakespeare's poetry, the depth of his philosophy, the universality of his knowledge and his all pervading Christianity. The latter of which had never occurred to the casual reader.

Manager McPherson has arranged for all children to have a chance of hearing Mr. Warde as will be seen in the advertisement in today's issue. The Elks and Knights of Pythias will have seats reserved.

Los Angeles Evening Express—Mr. Warde is absolute master of his subject. He is a speaker majestic in the extreme, scholarly in the presentation of the subject and delightful in style. For two hours he held his audience spell-bound, absolutely fascinated with his power of delineation, his subtle and delightful criticism, his magnetic oratory and graceful delivery.

A WILDERNESS OF FLOWERS

Thousands Upon Thousands of Roses, Carnations, Ferns and Everything.

WHAT PLUCK HAS DONE.

Ideal Attained After Many Years Battling Against Fickle Fortune.

Starting out when not much over eighteen to rub up against the world and with the determination to succeed in building up a business peculiarly his own, Thomas L. Metcalfe, the laundryman, soon convinced the people that he was made of the stuff that succeeds. His venture in the laundry business met with varying success at first, but the end of the month almost invariably found him with a little surplus over expenses. Everything in the way of clear profit has been put into improved machinery from time to time until now, at the expiration of 20 years of strenuous life, he has one of the best plants in the South. His patrons are legion. He gives the two express companies more business than all the other houses of the city combined, for there is hardly a city or town within a radius of 200 miles to which his work does not go.

But the object of this article is to more particularly call attention to another business taken up for development only eight years ago by Mr. Metcalfe. Seeing the great demand for flowers, both cut and potted, he could not see why the large shipments of flowers from St. Louis, Chicago, Nashville and Evansville could not be grown here. Seeing his opportunity, he began making arrangements for growing the many flowers required for social functions, banquets, tributes on funeral occasions, etc. Often he had to call on some of the ladies of the city who take pleasure in raising flowers to help him fill his orders. Year by year the little glass-roofed house at Sixth and Railroad streets grew larger and larger and one variety after another of the kingdom of Flora found its way and began to take root and bloom in the greenhouse of the tireless young man.

And so it has been from the beginning—more flowers demanded more room, and more room and more flowers called for more attention from the owner.

Mr. Metcalfe is a wonderfully industrious man. The days are consumed by duties so multitudinous, if called upon when he sits down to the evening meal he could not name half the things that received his attention. But work is not done with him when the day is gone. At his desk in the office of the laundry he attends to his correspondence that no one else can handle, and night after night of each week the click-click of the typewriter is heard close to the midnight hour. All of the employees are dead to the world in sleep, but the head of the two establishments cannot find rest until what must be done has been accomplished.

It is a fact that the people of our city and county know less of the proportions of Mr. Metcalfe's greenhouse than the people of other cities, for he is known far and wide as the producer of the choicest of flowers and orders come by mail from Nashville, Paducah, Henderson, Owensboro and often from the larger cities, which in early days supplied him on special orders. But Mr. Metcalfe believes in growing and expanding, and now has a plant at Madisonville about as large as the one here, as well as another at Clarksville. At this time he is quite busy here in putting his greenhouses, which cover more than half a square, Mr. Frank Brown, a native of Canada, and a man of long experience in floriculture, is at the head of the plant here. Mr. Decker, late with Martin, at Clarksville, is assisting Mr. Metcalfe in many details. Mr. Metcalfe is repairing to be safe from anything like a drop of the temperature to or below zero this winter and is spending a good deal of money in that direction. His watchman cannot afford to sleep on duty or neglect keeping the temperature at the right degree for a register that has been put in shows every variation in 24 hours. Then there is another that will ring a bell, and keep it up, if the temperature goes down to a certain number.

Mr. Metcalfe is up to date in flowers as well as details in successfully growing them. We were shown through the other day and were perfectly amazed at what we saw. We were in a wilderness of flowers—growing, budding, blooming flowers. Chrysanthemums, to the number of 5,000 or 6,000, nearly as many roses, of every name, banks of carnations everywhere you looked in full bloom and in the bud, ferns everywhere, including the Philadelphia lace ferns also brought from Tarrytown, N. Y., rubber plants, the celebrated Lewis Childs palms, pandarauts, new begonias, azaleas, geraniums, hundreds of calla and sacred lilies, peonies and spengerie asparagus, and almost every flower that can be named.

After eight years of hard work and planning Mr. Metcalfe has about attained the ideal that he started out after. Everything is about as can be and he invites all, particularly the ladies, to call and see the beauties that the fair sex so much love. It is an old saying that you can judge of the refinement of a woman by her love for flowers. The lover of flowers can have no excuse for not cultivating them, for Mr. Metcalfe is so reasonable in his prices that anyone can buy. His supply of roses and chrysanthemums is almost unlimited. Among his family of roses can be found Brides, Bridemaids, Kaisers, Golden, Gaiety, Ivories, American Beauties, La Frances, and others too numerous to mention. He has a number of the (Saidi) Mayes chrysanthemum, which when in full bloom, is white but later assumes a rich cream in color.

He has cases that cost him a big sum for keeping cut flowers for ten days in order to supply orders as soon as they come to hand.

Every function can be supplied at the shortest notice and decorations are a specialty.

Funeral orders, no matter what designs may be filled and sent on first train after orders are received.
